Great Father, receive the sweet spirit. That is bursting its fetters of clay !" He slept—be was gone to inherit
The crown and the kingdom of day.
That smite—like as in anti-c escaping.
From danger to mother's own breast-

We pressed to the edge of the river, And exught but one vanishing gleam, As, he entered the portals for ever, That oped the bright city to him. And still on the borders we linger, And geze up the pathway he trod; We have not the voice of the singer, But we know him at home with his God.

And silently still though I wonder Mid wrocks that are left by the tide,
Repeating the tearful surrender
Of the life that with Christ must abide; I hear a soft whisper of pardon,
And promise of ciping all tears;
A meeting, beyond this dark Jordan,
To last through unchungeable years.
